The manuscript entitled "From Practice to Stability: Examining the Impact of Political Practice on Democratic Stability through the Lens of Good Governance and Power Distribution" effectively highlights the significance of democratic stability and good governance in the context of developing countries, specifically focusing on Indonesia. The manuscript outlines the theoretical framework, including the Political Opportunity Structure theory and the Power-Distribution theory, which guide the research. The manuscript also mentions the use of cluster surveys and various statistical analyses to analyze the data. While the manuscript provides a comprehensive overview, there are a few areas where it could be improved.

1. The abstract could benefit from a clearer articulation of the specific research interests that guide the study. This would help readers better understand the purpose of the research and the specific aspects being investigated.
2. The manuscript must properly communicate the main findings of the study. It needs to indicate that political practices, including political leadership, political culture, and public policy, directly affect democratic stability.
3. The hypothesis: good governance acts as a mediator between political practices,

- and democratic stability requires more detail.
4. The manuscript could provide more details about the sample size and characteristics of the participants in the cluster survey conducted in West Java, Indonesia. This information would provide insights into the representativeness of the data and enhance the overall validity and generalizability of the findings.
 5. Lastly, the manuscript could mention the limitations of the study to provide a more balanced perspective. Identifying limitations would help readers understand the potential constraints and implications of the research.

Reviewer 2

Overall, the manuscript effectively conveys the main objectives, findings, and implications of the study, but it could be enhanced by including specific research objectives. Here are detailed comments.

1. The literature review of this study presents an overview of the theoretical foundation and hypotheses development for a research study on the relationship between political practices, good governance, power distribution, and democratic stability in the context of West Java, Indonesia. However, it should be concise and provide a brief overview of the Political Opportunity Structure theory and the Power Distribution theory.
2. It would be helpful to include more recent studies to ensure the review reflects the current state of knowledge.
3. The methodology section provides a brief overview of the study's design, sample selection, data collection, data analysis, and ethical considerations. While the information provided is relevant, it lacks detail. Including more specific information about the research design, survey instruments, and statistical analyses would enhance the rigor and transparency of the study. Additionally, it would be helpful to address potential limitations and strategies for mitigating them.
4. The authors must add a measures section briefly mentioning the scales used to measure the variables of interest. Describing the psychometric properties of the measures would strengthen the methodological rigor of the study.
5. The regression analysis results and their interpretation could be presented in a more concise and coherent manner.

Hyronimus Rowa:

The paper "From Practice to Stability: Examining the Impact of Political Practice on Democratic Stability through the Lens of Good Governance and Power Distribution" has been reviewed again.

Here are some critical observations and suggestions for improvement.

- The description of the theoretical foundation is clear and adequately explains the rationale for combining the Political Opportunity Structure theory and the Power Distribution theory. However, it would be beneficial to provide a more detailed explanation of how these theories specifically relate to this research context.
- The theoretical framework should be presented in a clear and visually appealing manner. The relationships between the variables need to be visually represented, which aids in understanding the proposed model.
- The results section needs to be well-organized, with clear section headings and tables to present the data. The descriptive statistics and correlation coefficients must be described.

The paper can be resubmitted for review after huge improvements, and this does not guarantee it will be approved.
